MINERS HOLD MEETING IN OGDEN

DELEGATES ARRIVE FROM VARIOUS CAMPS.

New Schedule of Wages and Working Conditions for Miners of Wyoming May Be Established.

The first session of the sixth annual convention of the Wyoming camp of the United Mine Workers of America, District No. 22, convened this morning in Labor hall and a considerable amount of preliminary work attended to, including the appointment of several officers as follows: Adam Barrass, chairman; John Ramsey, secretary; Benjamin Roberts, Alexander Revel and Louis Anselmi.

The convention will be in session for about a week before the joint conference is held between the mine workers and operators. Ogden was selected as the meeting place on account of its central location and its numerous recreation advantages.

Twenty-seven or more delegates from the various mining camps of Wyoming arrived in this city last night as representatives of District No. 22 of the United Mine Workers of America. Today they held the first session of a meeting which is expected to last for several weeks, and work will begin immediately, to the end that a new schedule of wages and working conditions for the miners of Wyoming may be established. After the scale has been agreed upon in their own body, they will meet a delegation from the Wyoming coal operators on July 26, and will hold a joint conference at which a working agreement will be made if possible to take the place of the one which expires September 1.

The delegates are making their home at the Broom while in the city. They are: Thomas Gibson, president of District No. 22, Sheridan, Wyo.; Arthur Morgan, vice president; Jas. Morgan, secretary and treasurer; Sharon, Wyo.; Martin of Oakley. The present wage scale in the coal fields of the executive board, Rock Springs, and the following accredited delegates: James Noble, John Holly, Louis Anselmi, Geo. Jones, Benj. H. Roberts, Thomas Davis, Benj. Morgan, James McLeod, of Superior, Wyo.; James McCoy, Noah Johnson of Dietz; John Ramsey, R. W. Reaney, Adam Barron, Thomas Cullen, F. D. Mangan and William Riebo of Rock Springs; James Buckley and John Ray of Cumberland; John B. Smith of Deville; James Hudson of Glenwood and John Martin of Oakley.

The present wage scale and working agreement were accepted by both sides only after a bitter struggle which began at Denver, where the regular session came to naught, and ended at Cheyenne at a special session. It was said by delegates last night that a considerable improvement in the better working conditions will be demanded, but they were reluctant about stating what they thought the outcome would be.

McCLAIR CAPTURED AFTER A LONG, HARD CHASE.

Philadelphia, June 21.—After a chase which led through many of the leading cities of this country and Mexico, James D. McClain, alias H. H. Dehaven, alias Joseph D. O'Brien, was arrested at Shelly, Pa., near here, on the charge of forging a check for $500 in Chicago. McClain is said to have been at one time a government contractor in the Philippines. He arrived in Chicago a few years ago and secured a position with the Ross Dean Electrical Construction company, disappearing after the discovery that the firm's name had been forged to a check. Detectives traced him to Denver, Salt Lake City, Mexico, San Francisco, Washington, and finally to Shelly.

INCREASE IN NET EARNINGS. Chicago, June 21.—A bulletin made public here today by the bureau of railway news and statistics shows that the operation of the 2-cent fare law in Illinois cost the railroads of the state $15,609,900 during the last fiscal year. On this point the bureau takes issue with the report of the Illinois railway and warehouse commission, which states that the roads showed an increase of nearly two millions in earnings because of increased travel due to the lower rate.

OBJECTS TO CITY'S HAY SIGN

OGDEN MAN WHO SUFFERED MUCH HUMILIATION.

He Was With a Salt Laker When Park Keeper Ordered Them Both Off the Grass.

Ogden, Utah, June 21, 1909. Editor Standard: I have a grievance and a complaint to make. My feelings have been hurt and when that happens to a real estate man you can depend upon it that it was a pretty severe shock. It happened thus:

One day last week I was showing a Salt Lake man some of the points of interest about the city. We went up the Twenty-second street car line to Monroe and there walked over to Twentieth. We looked at the Deaf and Dumb Institute and I pointed out to him the Reform school in the distance.

Said Mr. Salt Lake, "You have two state institutions here in Ogden now and yet you want the capital?" I answered to him that it was in good faith our intention to take the capital away from Salt Lake at an early date.

"Excuse my laughing," he said, "but you Ogden people are all so cocksure that you are going to succeed. Now tell me in what part of the town you will locate it?"

I explained that in the southeast portion of the city was University Place, a magnificent site, that could be readily reached by a belt line that the street car people were sure to build when the capital came to Ogden. Such a line would save the Twenty-second street car hastening westward. "Too late for that car," said Mr. Salt Lake, "never mind, there will probably be another along in a few minutes."

Then I was obliged to explain to him that the Rapid Transit company had made so many extensions—to the City Springs, to Ogden Canyon, to Plain City and down Wall avenue—that they were short of cars and as a result there was only a twenty-minute service on Twenty-second street, at the present time, but that would only last a few days until the cars ordered by the company would arrive when there would probably be a ten minute service established.

This seemed to be a satisfactory explanation and we decided to wait twenty minutes for the next car, and to spend the time resting in the shade of Liberty Park. "We have a Liberty Park in Salt Lake," said my friend, "and it is just four times the size of this?" I pointed out the clay-bank horse that was dragging a lawn mower about and asked him if Liberty Park in Salt Lake was kept in as nice shape as the park of the same name in Ogden. "Well, no," he said, "I am afraid there are parts of our Liberty Park that are trimmed up about once a year with a weed seythe."

An automobile came whizzing by. My friend commented on the good judgment of the Park Commission in allowing the public to use the road-way through the park. We reached the southeast entrance of the park and the last of the shade. The nearest benches were occupied. A group of children were playing some game under the trees not far away. A convalescent patient from the Japanese hospital lay full length on the grass by the roadside. We had seen him there half an hour before. A man with a hose sprinkled water on the grass a hundred yards away and the old claybank continued to hustle the lawn mower around.

It was a quiet, happy and contented scene. We felt at peace with all the world and sat down on the grass under a tree. Mr. Salt Lake again referred to the removal of the capital to Ogden. It was plainly worrying him. He seemed to want to be reconciled to the change.

So I gave him a ten-minute talk on the many points where Ogden was superior to Salt Lake as a residence city, as a railroad center, as a manufacturing and distributing point, and I thought I had him going north pretty fast, when a voice that had not been heard for a long time broke in:

"Hey! Can't you see dem signs?" He stared around, but did not locate the speaker. Then we went on talking, but the voice broke in once more, and nearer, clearer, deadlier than before:

"Hey! Can't you see dem signs?" It was the man behind the hose that was doing the talking and he was lifting up his voice and moving his arms to such an extent that no one in the park need have any doubt as to whom he was addressing. It dawned upon us that in sitting on the grass we were violating the instructions which say "Keep Off—Use the Walk."

We arose with much dignity and each took a step, twenty inches long, south by southeast and were on the gravel walk and out of the jurisdiction of the Man with the Hose.

The man with the hose remained in his reclining position on the grass, about fifty feet away, and grinned at us.

The man on the lawn mower looked over his shoulder and I am certain he also grinned.

The old claybank glanced our way and seemed to have hard work to suppress a horse laugh.

The children stopped their game and the people on the benches discussed us.

The man with the hose, having strutted through his brief moment of authority, turned away—a righteous soul well pleased with himself—"he had saw his duty and he done it."

Then the man that hurt most was that the Salt Lake man seemed sorry for me. To help the situation out he said, "Why don't his nibs make the Jap get off the grass?"

I could not offer an explanation. I was too badly hit to think straight. The phlegmaticness of the scheme of raising ten acres of sacred hay in the heart of the city was just dawning on me.

Then the Salt Laker made a guess, "Maybe your park commission is afraid of international complications with Japan?"

I tried to defend the park commission, but I could not make it go. When I looked at the ten acres of hay land being watered through $200 worth of rubber hose at a cost of about $5 a day and realized that it was simply to look at and not for a white man, a citizen and a taxpayer, or his guest, to walk on or to sit on, I would get my adjectives mixed.

As we walked out toward the car line the Salt Laker said, "You were saying something about moving the capital here?"

How I hated that man! I tried to take up the argument where I had left off, but somehow, after having been ordered to get off the earth, Ogden did not seem to have such a cinch.

We stood on in the sun a long time waiting for that car. When we got on he insisted on paying the fares and urged me to take a seat on the shady side. He was very kind to me. As soon as we got down town I made an excuse to bid him good-bye. His train did not leave for two hours, but he went at once to the depot.

Now, Mr. Editor, really and truly, don't you think that it is time to let people get some benefit from the parks? Is it or is it not Tommy rot to tax the people to keep the parks and then order them to "keep off the grass"? Is the grass worth the risk of having strangers offended and made to feel unwelcome by some over-fertile park-keeper?

Is it not possible that if the people could once get $15,000 worth of benefit and pleasure out of our parks in a year they might be willing to have that much money spent the next year on the parks?

Some day the Park Commission will go before the city council and want some more money to spend. When that happens I want the council to give them the money with this proviso: That the appropriation shall not be available until the Park Commission shall have removed all the "Keep Off" signs and shall have posted up at the entrance of each park the following, to-wit:

"NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC: You are welcome. This park is public property. The Man With the Hose does not own it. You are at liberty to walk on the grass, to sit on the grass, to lie down and roll over on the grass if you want to. If you wear the grass out we will simply have the man grow some more grass. DO NOT KEEP OFF THE GRASS."

Respectfully submitted, O. A. KENNEDY.

MRS. LOUISE GESSFORD IS SEEKING A DIVORCE

In Her Action Against Ralph G. Gessford, Sensational Charge Is Made.

Salt Lake, June 22.—Mrs. Louise Gessford says in her complaint for divorce, filed in the Third district court Monday, that Ralph G. Gessford failed to provide for her, even down to furnishing her with proper clothing, and when requested to do so advised her to go to the laundry to get her clothes. If she desired clothes badly to resort to a life of shame to secure the money to get them.

Mrs. Gessford demands reasonable alimony with the divorce. The couple were married at Sacramento, Cal., September 25, 1906. No mention is made of any children.

T. J. Moloney filed suit for divorce from Hazel Moloney, alleging immoral conduct on her part. Moloney says they were married at Pocatello, July 12, 1906, and have two children, Thomas B. and Arthur, 2 years and 6 months old, respectively. For seven months Mrs. Moloney cruelly mistreated him, he says, and then left, going to a house of ill repute on Commercial street, taking the elder son with her. This was in December, of last year, he alleges, and in order to carry out her plans to lead an immoral life Mrs. Moloney, he says he understands, has placed the children in the State street orphanage. Charging that she is unfit to have their custody, he asks that they be awarded to him, with the divorce.

MRS. REID GIVES RED CROSS HOSPITAL BOTTLE OF RADIUM

San Francisco, June 22.—It has been learned here that Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, wife of the United States ambassador to Great Britain, has presented the Red Cross Guild hospital of San Mateo with a tiny bottle of radium, which she sent from London. The precious metal is to be used for experimental purposes. The hospital is situated near the home of D. O. Miller, the father of Mrs. Reid and the place where she grew to womanhood.

Seoul, June 22.—Charles W. Fairbanks, former vice president of the United States, who is in Korea on a tour around the world, has determined to extend his stay several days beyond the time originally fixed for his departure, because of his deep interest in Korean affairs.

Mr. Fairbanks will be granted an audience with the emperor on Thursday, June 24, and immediately following that, will continue on his tour, passing through Pingyang, Antung and Mukden. He will visit the various American missions along this route and will inspect several of the far-famed gold mines.

Mr. Fairbanks visited the schools, hospitals and missions in Seoul on Monday, and delivered a number of Korean people to take advantage of the many opportunities offered them, and to secure the improvement of the people and the country through good government.

ENGINEER NOT REQUIRED TO STOP TRAIN TO SAVE DOG

Macon, Ga., June 22.—A locomotive engineer is not required to stop his train to save a dog, if it appears to him that the dog is in good health and a capable sprinter. That was Judge Shelton's decision in directing a verdict for the defendant, in the case of Dr. G. A. Goben, against a railroad company in the circuit court here.

Dr. Goben sued for $500 because his fox hound was run over and killed by the defendant's train in 1906. The evidence showed that the dog had started down the track ahead of the train, and that when it saw the train coming behind, it increased its speed.

The court held that it was evidence of enough intelligence to warrant the engineer in believing the dog would get off the track.

BISHOP McFAUL DENOUNCES HARVARD, YALE AND PRINCETON

New York, June 21.—"Harvard, Yale and Princeton are undermining faith and teaching immorality; if the Catholics who are sending their sons to these colleges know of the immorality, immorality and the disrespect for all mankind that is being taught in these institutions they would tear down the buildings," said Bishop James A. McFaul of Trenton, N. J., in his address tonight to the graduating class of St. Xavier college.

He condemned what he said was the desire of Catholic parents to get their children into society through the associations met in the great non-sectarian universities. "What we want is to send them to Catholic schools, where we teach them the commandments," said the bishop.

MANUFACTURERS OF RECORDS ARE BANKRUPT

PETITION AGAINST LEEDS & CATLIN FILED BY CREDITORS.

Company Is One of the Largest Concerns, Making Disc and Cylinder Talking Machine Records.

New York, June 22.—Alleging liabilities of $1,000,000, a petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday afternoon against the Leeds & Catlin company, manufacturers and wholesale dealers in disc and cylinder records for talking machines, by Leonard Gronner, attorney for several creditors. The judge, in the United States district court, said he would consider the appointment of a receiver today. The petition alleges that the company is insolvent, and asks for preferential payment of $10,000 and transferred assets of $5,000.

The Leeds & Catlin company is one of the largest concerns in that line of business in the country. It has a large factory at Middletown, Conn., with offices in New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Denver and San Francisco. The company was started in 1892, on a small capital, and worked up to an enormous business. The company's statement of August 21, 1908, showed liabilities of $661,120 and assets of $2,003,000. A recent decision of the United States supreme court, holding that this company had been infringing on the basic patent of another large concern at Camden, N. J., is believed to have been responsible for the action yesterday.

Following this decision thousands of retailers throughout the country notified the Leeds & Catlin company, it is said, that they would not pay for the stock they had on hand, for fear of claims from the company held to be the rightful owner of the patent.
